INTRODUCTION

"Catalogue of Noses" is a short musical comedy film with 'Fiddler on the Roof' parody songs that illustrate the sacrifices Jewish women make to assimilate. Inspired by Writer/Producer Lauren Schaffel's own life story of growing up as a child actor in Hollywood and getting a nose job at sixteen.

MISSION STATEMENT

"Catalogue of Noses" combats the harmful portrayal of Jews in media that still exists today, and which is built on centuries of underlying antisemitism. Since the antidote to hate is comedy, we're telling a story that pokes fun at Western beauty standards and Jewish stereotypes with an educational twist.

We are proud to partner with Reboot Studios on an educational curriculum for "Catalogue of Noses." Designed to accompany the film, this guide supports our mission to spark meaningful dialogue and deepen understanding of its central themes — including the pressures of assimilation, the origins and impact of the Jewish-nose stereotype, as well as the persistence of antisemitism in contemporary media.

Our goal is to bring this program to Jewish and non-Jewish communities in cities where we're screening the film, including schools, museums, and religious organizations. The target audience is middle school age and up, including college students and adults.

About Reboot: Reboot is an arts and culture non-profit that reimagines and reinforces Jewish thought and traditions, offering an inviting mix of discovery, experience and reflection.

About the Lesson Plan: The "Catalogue of Noses" companion curriculum is a guided educational tool for teachers, group leaders, and individuals looking to engage further with the themes of the film. Through private reflection, group discussion, and a creative exercise, students will be introduced to key terms and cultural context, the origin of the "Jewish nose" stereotype, and the history of rhinoplasty as they relate to the central question of the film: What are the costs and benefits of assimilation? The lesson plan is designed to take one class period; educators may adjust the length to fit their curriculum. This lesson plan is designed to accompany High School Education through adults and is most suitable for students over the age of 12.

To learn more or bring this curriculum to your organization, please visit www.rebooting.com/catalogue-of-noses or contact Producer Lauren Schaffel.

JOURNAL & MAGAZINE REVIEWS

"Josie Andrews superbly directs this delightful musical short. All the performances are wonderful, and everyone brings high energy to their roles. Jemma Handler has a beautiful singing voice and perfectly handles the material. Both Lori Alan and Michael Kostroff are scene stealers in their supporting roles. … It is awesome to have a lighthearted musical again! Catalogue of Noses is a palette cleanser in a world where musicals are uninspired remakes, overtly political, and unnecessarily campy. Schaffel's story provides a great message for teenagers about feeling confident in their appearance. See this film, whether you love the musical genre or are a casual viewer."

- Ethan Padgett, FilmThreat
  link: https://filmthreat.com/reviews/catalogue-of-noses/

"A fetching new short musical comedy film, Catalogue of Noses with a bonus Fiddler on the Roof parody, is a hooter. … This dark yet breezy comedy features a top cast. … Anyone who loves musicals and comedy will lap up the LA-set romp, with original- and outrageous- songs."

- Gordon Durich, The Hollywood Times
  link: https://hollywoodtimes.net/catalogue-of-noses-not-so-funny-under-the-surface-but-fun-film-just-the-same/

"A sharp and surprisingly devastating portrait of what happens when young girls internalize the idea that their natural face is a liability. … A relatable on-screen situation centered around a teenager still figuring out who she is. … The musical numbers allow the film to embrace the absurdity of the premise, while also heightening the stakes. … The film feels real and so much of it is in the vulnerability in Jemma's lead performance. … "Catalogue of Noses" is not anti-surgery. It's anti-silence. … The ending doesn't offer a tidy resolution. It offers something harder."

- Brian Fishbach, Jewish Journal

"There is a mixture of hilarious lines and ironic scenes that make every part entertaining. … There is a gut-wrenching, but strong, message that comes through, even with all the fun visual and auditory elements. … This idea is applicable to different cultures and communities as well."

- Joy Kim, League of Filmmakers

"The film's commentary on assimilation and Jewish identity resonates even more against Hollywood's long history of misrepresentation. … [The film] entertains while offering a sharp commentary on assimilation, beauty standards, and Jewish identity. In just 12 minutes, it balances humor with insight, highlighting the pressures—both cultural and personal—that shape how we present ourselves to the world."

"[A] humorous short. … "Catalogue of Noses" doesn't take itself too seriously, is great fun to watch, and Handler is memorable in a performance that shows moxie."

FILM FESTIVAL REVIEWS

"A sarcastic and sharp-witted film, witty and creative, that unexpectedly turns into a crazy and unbridled musical. The cinematic language is surprising in its precision, backed by a rich production and surreal scenes that are etched in the memory."

- Esther Alush, Festival Director, Shomron International Film Festival

"A comedy with dramatic depth rooted in reality, whose perspective extends beyond a specific community. Drawing on elements of musical comedy, it stages a universal concern: the desire to fit in and the struggle to conform to impossible beauty standards, often assumed as a prerequisite condition for being accepted."

- Judges' Feedback & Comments*, Film Festival, Punta del Este Jewish Film Festival*
  (translated from the original in Uruguayan Spanish)

"[Catalogue of Noses" was truly one of the most original submissions we received this year. The premise immediately stood out to us: a musical comedy about a Jewish teen actor facing nose surgery, family pressure, cultural identity, and assimilation. It is bold, funny, and genuinely memorable. We appreciated the film's distinctive voice and the way it uses comedy and theatricality to explore something much deeper: the complicated relationship between appearance, inheritance, identity, and belonging. It is rare to see a short film take such a specific cultural question and approach it with this much humor, imagination, and personality. It absolutely stood out to us for its originality, wit, and singular point of view. … A fresh and memorable piece of work."

- Irmak Tasindi, Festival Director, Brown Media Group Film Festival

"A lot of laughs in this film. When the dancing noses come out in the doctor's office, we cracked up. We also really loved the "twist" so to speak in the casting office when she's older. And genuinely poignant!"

- Programing Committee's Comments*, Film Festival, Dances With Films: LA*

"Catalogue of Noses" "truly stands out in quality, creativity, storytelling, and entertainment value! … [This] short film was genuinely a wonder to watch. The acting, cinematography, atmosphere, story, and deeper meaning behind the film were all perfectly executed. It is the kind of short that feels completely professional and cinematic — something audiences could easily imagine discovering and loving on Netflix or another major platform. Every aspect of the film felt thoughtful, polished, and emotionally engaging. It truly left an impression on us."

- Lisandro Boccacci*, Festival Director, Stay Gold Film Festival*

ABOUT THE PRODUCTION

"Catalogue of Noses" has been in the works since Summer 2022. The script was originally commissioned and workshopped as a play for the LA-based theater company JewFace under ShPIeL Performing Identity and was part of their inaugural Short Play Development Lab in Fall 2023. Fueled by the positive reception from the JewFace public reading, the script was adapted into a short film to share the story with a wider audience.

In Spring 2024, the "Catalogue of Noses" screenplay was selected as a semifinalist for the Reboot Studios Grant, which has produced several award-winning Jewish comedies, including Alex Edelman's solo show Just For Us and the short film The Anne Frank Gift Shop.

In Summer 2024, the Jewish Plays Project recognized the "Catalogue of Noses" play script as Commended Status, part of a select group of plays read and discussed thoroughly by a team of theatre professionals.

"Catalogue of Noses" is TRIPLE F-rated with a woman director, writer, and principal actor.

"Catalogue of Noses" was shot on location in Glendale, Los Angeles County, California over the course of 3 days.

"Catalogue of Noses" raised most of its budget through a successful Seed&Spark crowdfunding campaign, with over $20,000 in pledged donations in support.

"Catalogue of Noses" is an accredited signatory production under the SAG-AFTRA Short Film Agreement.

"Catalogue of Noses" is the second collaboration between Lauren Schaffel and David M. Night Maire after the short grounded sci-fi "Launch at Paradise".

WRITERS' STATEMENT

I grew up as a child actor in Los Angeles and starred in many primetime comedies like Will and Grace, Still Standing, and several Peanuts films and series (as the voice of Lucy). My dream was to be a series regular on a sitcom, but most of the roles I auditioned for were things like "Freak Girl Number 2" and "Nerdy Little Rascal." Exactly what every little girl dreams of being, right? I kept being told that my BIG Jewish nose was holding me back…

I wrote "Catalogue of Noses" to combat 'Jewface'— the harmful, inauthentic portrayal of Jews in entertainment including the stereotypes of a large nose prosthetic and an affected Yiddish accent. These stereotypes still exist in Hollywood today and are built on centuries of underlying antisemitism. Since the antidote to hate is comedy, I set out to tell a film that pokes fun at beauty standards and Jewish stereotypes with an educational twist.

Having been a child actor in Hollywood, I've faced the pressures of having to change my appearance (specifically my nose) to achieve American beauty standards. These ideas have become more topical with celebrities like Sarah Silverman speaking out about a more recent definition of "Jewface" in the casting of non-Jewish performers to play Jewish characters. On her podcast, Sarah Silverman speaks openly about some recent examples of Jewface, including Bradley Cooper and Helen Mirren wearing large prosthetic noses to portray Leonard Bernstein and Golda Meir, respectively, Rachel Brosnahan in The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel adopting a 'Jewish-sounding' dialect, and Kathryn Hahn (not Jewish) being cast to play Joan Rivers.

I'm proud to be working with a team of predominantly Jewish women in front of and behind the camera to tell this timely and relatable story. This film is for Jewish women who have made sacrifices to assimilate into western culture, whether they've undergone surgery to make their nose appear more gentile, or as in the story of Fiddler on the Roof, given up traditions and religious practices as a means of survival.

Yet, this story is not unique to Jews! We live in a world where pressures to assimilate have increased for people of all backgrounds, especially with our reliance on social media constantly demonstrating unattainable standards of beauty. Turn on Instagram and you'll see a variety of filters available to "touch up" one's appearance, including the infamous "nose filter" to alter the size of your nose, as well as enhancing one's eyes, lips, and body. My goal is to shed light on the universality of the need to seek acceptance and achieve unrealistic beauty standards as a means of survival and acceptance.

- Lauren Schaffel

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

At a time when antisemitism has increased rapidly since October 7th, this story feels sadly more important now than ever. For centuries, Jews have been making sacrifices to assimilate into western culture, whether it's undergoing surgery to make one's nose appear more gentile, or in the story of Fiddler on the Roof, giving up traditions and religious practices as a means of survival.

Michael Kostroff is a television, stage, and film actor best known for his five seasons as unscrupulous gang attorney Maury Levy on HBO's legendary series, "The Wire," and for his recurring roles on a long list of popular television shows. Born in New York City, he grew up attending theatre and went on to study at the High School of Performing Arts. He traveled throughout the US as a member of the original cast of the first national tour of "The Producers," and again as the comic villain, Thénadier, in "Les Misérables," a role he reprised for the re-imagined 25th anniversary production. Kostroff is the author of four books including "The Stage Actor's Handbook" (Rowman & Littlefield, 2022), named one of Playbill.com's must-reads for fall, 2022. He's a former advice columnist for Backstage and a former writer for Disneyland. His blog, "The Weekly Curmudgeon," offers humorous gripes. As an instructor, he's offered classes in acting, comedic acting, the business of the business, and more. His popular Audition Psych 101 workshop deals with the mental part of the audition process. Kostroff has also been a frequent guest at colleges, universities, and theatre schools. He divides his time between New York and Los Angeles.
